AYMAN LATIF, et al., Plaintiffs,	Case 3:10-cv-00750-BR
v. ERIC H. HOLDER, JR., et al., Defendants.	DECLARATION OF SHARON M. RAYA

DECLARATION OF SHARON M. RAYA

I, Sharon M. Raya, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, declare the following under penalty of perjury:

1. I am a Paralegal Specialist with the Federal Programs Branch of the Civil Division of the United States Department of Justice. I have held this position since March 2010. As part of my duties as a paralegal specialist, I am authorized to conduct research in connection to civil litigation.

2. I have been assigned to the above-captioned matter since July 2010. Since that time, I have conducted extensive internet research and contacted various travel agencies to analyze the ability of U.S. citizens to return to the United States from abroad by means other than flying through United States airspace. I compiled materials on how to travel by cruise ship, cargo ship, and freighter, and I recorded such information as ports of call, types of ships, amenities, travel requirements and restrictions, fares, and document requirements.
3. In searching for itineraries, I learned that transatlantic cargo ships regularly carry between six and twelve passengers each. Ships that carry passengers provide them quarters in single- or double- occupancy rooms that typically feature private bathrooms and showers, refrigerators, and electronic entertainment devices such as televisions and stereos. E.g. Maris Freighter Cruise & Travel Club Int'l, Q&A Freighter Guide, http://www.freightercruises.com/q_a_freighter_cruise_guide.php (last accessed Aug. 24, 2010). Most passenger-carrying transatlantic cargo ships are equipped with exercise rooms and pools, and passengers often dine with the crew of the ship. See, e.g., TravLTips Cruise & Freighter Ass'n, Charleston to Northern Europe (June 24, 2010), available at http://www.travltips.com/NSB_Northern_Europe.pdf.
4. After calling the number that the website of the freighter travel agency TravLTips advertised, I spoke with an individual who introduced himself as "Mike" in the reservations department on July 16, 2010. Mike told me that passengers are strongly encouraged to book passage through a booking agency, which completes the necessary traveling paperwork in advance of the travel date. Mike explained the usual booking process: passengers request a potential departure date and place, and the booking agency finds the cargo company with the closest match. During the same conversation, Mike noted that final itinerary details depend on the timeframe in which a vessel completes a roundtrip voyage, the number of passengers that a vessel can accommodate, and the length of the voyage. He also explained that one-way fares, calculated on a per-person, per-day rate, tend to be much less than the advertised prices of round-trip voyages.

5. Mike and I spoke again on August 5, 2010. During this conversation, I received more specific information about particular two transatlantic itineraries. The first itinerary we discussed leaves biweekly from Antwerp, Belgium, and stops in Liverpool, England; Chester, Pennsylvania; and Wilmington, Delaware. I was informed that U.S. citizens can book one-way passage from Liverpool to Chester; U.S. citizens disembarking in the U.S. need not present proof of onward passage. The base fare for passage from Liverpool to Chester costs $1,175, plus $402 for trip insurance and $203 for port charges. The approximate total for the Liverpool trip is $1780. See TravLtips Cruise & Freighter Ass'n, Transatlantic Cruise to Northern Europe (April 16, 2010), available at <http://www.travltips.com/Independent.pdf>. See Attachments.
6. The second itinerary that Mike and I discussed leaves regularly from Bremerhaven, Germany, and stops in Felixstowe, England; Rotterdam, Holland; Antwerp, Belgium; LeHavre, France; Boston, Massachusetts; New York, New York; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Baltimore, Maryland; and Norfolk, Virginia. As with the first itinerary, I was informed that one-way passengers may request one-way passage to a port in the United States, and U.S. citizens disembarking in the U.S. need not present proof of onward passage. According to Mike, the cost for a one-way passage would be calculated on a per-person, per-day rate at approximately $100-$140. The base fare for a one-way trip on the Bremerhaven voyage at half the trip length (approximately 16 days) and $100 per-day the voyage, costs $1600, plus $289 for port taxes and trip insurance and $12.50 for U.S. Customs and Immigrations fees. The approximate total for the Bremerhaven trip is $1901.50. See TravLTips Cruise & Freighter Ass'n, Europe to North Atlantic (May 19, 2010), available at <http://www.travltips.com/Tanzania.pdf>. See Attachments.

7. I also researched and compiled information on airfare from Yemen and Saudi Arabia to the countries from which the freighters described above depart. Searching airfares offered by various travel websites yielded the following quotes for one-way flights using the travel date November 17, 2010:

- a. From Yemen to Germany for $564-644;
- b. From Saudi Arabia to Germany for $663-3749;
- c. From Yemen to England for $316-4138;
- d. From Saudi Arabia to England for $544-3978.
- e. From Yemen to New York $514-2360
- f. From Saudi Arabia to New York $730-1556

8. To the best of my knowledge, there are currently no direct commercial flights available from Yemen to the United States.
9. In addition to researching freighter passage and airfares, I compiled entry and exit requirements on each country through which an individual would travel under one of the itineraries discussed above. To collect visa information, I visited the U.S. Department of State website and the website of certain countries' respective tourism bureaus. I also discussed entry and exit requirements with representatives of local embassies and travel agencies with whom I had previously been in contact.

10. In the course of my research, I was informed that the following countries require that U.S. citizens need only produce a valid U.S. passport for one-way travel: Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, and the Netherlands (having ratified the Schengen Agreement and allowing US citizens entry for a total of 90 days as tourists without a visa); England (requiring only a valid U.S. passport), Colombia (allowing U.S. citizens to enter and remain for 60 days without a visa but requiring proof of onward travel); Panama (allowing U.S. citizens to enter and remain for up to 90 days on a valid US passport without a visa and not requiring sea travelers remaining aboard a ship to present a visa, report to customs, or pay any fees); Peru (allowing U.S. citizens to enter and remain up to 90 days on a valid U.S. passport without a visa); Mexico (allowing U.S. citizens with valid U.S. passport to enter and remain up to 180 days).

11. I visited the following sources for information:
